We invite you to join the National Counter Terrorism Security Office (NaCTSO) at the International Security Expo 2024, taking place on the 24-25 September at Olympia London.

This year, the event brings together the global security community to explore innovative products, witness live demonstrations, and hear from top security experts.

Keynote speakers include Deputy Assistant Commissioner Jon Savell (Counter Terrorism Policing) and Superintendent Amanda King (Head of NaCTSO) will also be taking part in a fireside chat with Figen Murray, giving a unique insight into terror from victim and law enforcement perspectives.

Visit the NaCTSO stand C85, located in the Government Zone, to learn more about our current projects including National Vehicle Threat Mitigation. Find out more about Vehicle as a Weapon threats (VAW), use of Vehicle Born Improvised Explosive Devices (VBIED) as weapons against people, events or infrastructure, and to talk to the experts about deployment of temporary vehicle security barriers.

We will also have new products to showcase including ACT in a BOX, an interactive experience which enables businesses to rehearse and explore their response to fictional terrorist incidents and the ProtectUK Risk Management Process (RMP) tailored specifically to manage terrorist risk. Our specialist team are on hand to answer any questions you may have.

With all this in mind, we encourage you to mark these dates in your diary and be part of this essential security event.
